To all my friends who are concerned about, support, and believe in me and to those who are suspicious of, oppress, and humiliate me:

My name is Wu Zeheng. I was imprisoned for eleven years and released recently. I hereby extend my sincerest greetings and heartfelt gratitude to all my friends.

Ten years of suffering in prison has not changed my heartfelt love for my country and its people. Regardless of occurrences in the past, present, or future, I, Wu Zeheng still am faithful to the Chinese nation, support the Proper Dharma, and pursue the harmonious unification of the society. It is the duty and obligation of every Chinese descendant to promote the great rejuvenation of China.

Even though I have been released from prison, I frequently suffer the “care and attention” from authorities; I am unable to enjoy the legal freedoms and rights to which every citizen is entitled; and I am unable to have a normal life. But still I would like to take this opportunity to express my feelings to all sectors of society: May all my friends, followers, and students who are concerned about and support me always adhere to the principle of “benefiting the people and sharing the burdens of our nation.” To all friends who are suspicious, oppress, and humiliate me: May we engage in dialogue, based on equality, even-handedness, and mutual understandings, so that I may be accorded the basic legal rights and dignity granted by law. While I am full confidence and expectations of a brighter future for China, I am deeply concerned about China’s inferior and depraved character.

I love this land, where I was born and raised, and I love the people who live in this land. I eagerly look forward to the day, under the promotion and guidance Communist Party of China, we have democracy, freedom, and equality and a harmonious and prosperous society for the people.

I return mournfully after ten years in purgatory and hope that this catastrophe is not beyond remedy.

Wu Zeheng

《信心与勇气》(2010年3月24日) 写给和道法师的信

在忧虑:

以慈悲心去看待的土地和众生。三教四教土地
的仁爱。我想的慈悲是慈悲。以平等心和智慧
看待一切众生。在苦难中给予帮助。在下等众生中
给予帮助。

十身菩萨。诸佛菩萨。以慈悲心。一视
同仁。不分别众生。
